Previn has a wealth of experience across all areas of family law, including financial, private and public cases. With this background, he now specialises in public proceedings. He primarily represents parents and children in care cases.

Previn is known for his approachable manner and focus on client care. He is able to advance his clients' position through all stages of proceedings and robustly represent them at contested hearings.

He has experience of non-accidental injury cases involving babies, complex emotional harm matters and cases with an international element. Much of his work involves issues surrounding substance misuse, mental health difficulties and domestic violence.

Previn is an elected borough councillor and has an interest in planning. To balance the excitement of sitting on the planning committee, he also enjoys mountain biking and all types of music, particularly electronic.
